AC Carter to play Museum Mix

The Georgia Museum of Art at the University of Georgia will host Museum Mix on Thursday, September 27, from 8 to 11 p.m. All of the galleries will be open for the late-night art party. DJ .53 will be blasting your favorites, and free refreshments and snacks will be provided. The event is free and open to the public.

AC Carter, a second-year master of fine arts student in sculpture at the Lamar Dodd School of Art, will be playing the music for the night and has many DJ alter egos. She says, “Lambda Celsius is sort of the main brain, with the other characters associated with them such as: Ana Echo, the conceptual character that formats the new record (currently billed and performing); DJ .53 (who is currently being drafted into existence); and Vixcine Martine, the PhD student accepted into Lamar Dodd who is researching women in music, and how ‘stars’ are born by documenting and analyzing the work of Lambda Celsius.”

DJ .53 will be joining us for Museum Mix. Carter says, “When I DJ as .53, I spin 80s post punk and synth wave, as well as current artists who cross genres, ranging from the experimental to pop, finding the similarities between the 80s and the now. Expect to hear The Associates with Holly Herndon, A.R. Kane with Peaches and Grace Jones with Geneva Jacuzzi.”

Exhibitions on view include: “For Home and Country: World War I Posters from the Blum Collection,” “One Heart, One Way: The Journey of a Princely Art Collection” and “Vernacular Modernism: The Photography of Doris Ulmann.”

Sponsors of the event include: Cinnaholic, Cali-N-Tito’s, Ike & Jane Cafe and Bakery, Taziki’s Mediterranean Cafe, Marti’s at Midday and Big City Bread.
